The Broncos will return to the field July 27 for the first of 12 training camp practices open to the public. The team will conclude their camp in Santa Clara, Calif., where they will have two joint practices with the 49ers (Aug. 16-17) and one solo practice (Aug. 18) before the teams meet for a Week 2 preseason game at Levi’s Stadium (Aug. 19, 8 p.m. MDT).

This year will be the third consecutive training camp in which the Broncos have practiced with the 49ers ahead of their preseason matchup. But it will be the first time since 2007 (Dallas) the Broncos have traveled for joint practices.

New this year for the 12 practices at Dove Valley will be the presence of food trucks by the Pat Bowlen Fieldhouse, and “Kids Day” on Aug. 4 in celebration of Miles the Mascot’s birthday.

All workouts open to fans at UCHealth Training Center will begin at 9:30 a.m. and end at noon. Gates will open approximately 90 minutes before practice and seating along the grassy berm by the fieldhouse is first come, first serve.

Broncos announce training camp schedule
By Mike Klis
9 News
June 23, 2017

There will be fewer opportunities to view the Denver Broncos during training camp this year, but the experience figures to be more pleasant.

There are 12 open-to-public practices this year, which will all run from 9:30 a.m. to 12 p.m. at the UCHealth Training Center. The first training camp workout that can be viewed by fans is July 27. There are usually a few more practices available to fans but the Broncos are using one of their training camp weeks to hold joint workouts with the San Francisco 49ers in Santa Clara, Calif.

As always, admission and parking are free during camp. A couple new perks: Food trucks, which will be parked alongside the Pat Bowlen Fieldhouse, and ATM and credit card machines will be available.

The Broncos’ training camp schedule that is open to the public (again, all sessions start at 9:30 a.m.):

Thursday, July 27
Friday, July 28
Saturday, July 29
Sunday, July 30
Monday, July 31
Wednesday, Aug. 2
Thursday, Aug. 3
Friday, Aug. 4 9 (Kids Day to celebrate mascot Miles' birthday)
Saturday, Aug. 5
Monday, Aug. 7
Tuesday, Aug. 8

Thursday, Aug. 10: Preseason game at Chicago Bears

Saturday, Aug. 12

Some fan reminders: Lawn chairs and umbrellas are not permitted so have proper footwear for berm seating and sunscreen.
Will Cody Latimer make the roster this year considering all of the wide receiver competition?

Steve Browning

Steve—I have Latimer making the team. It appears the Broncos are planning on keeping six receivers for their 53-man roster. Four are set: Demaryius Thomas, Emmanuel Sanders and rookies Carlos Henderson, who was drafted in the third round, and Isaiah McKenzie, a fifth rounder who is expected to be the Broncos’ returner and occasional offensive multi-threat option.

That leaves a terrific competition for the final two receiver spots from this group: Latimer, Bennie Fowler III, Jordan Taylor, Kalif Raymond, Marlon Brown and Hunter Sharp.

These final two receivers must be core special teamers and Latimer is easily the best special teamer. He also had a fine spring lining up as the Broncos’ No. 3 receiver. I think Fowler has the edge for the No. 6 spot.

But that’s how it looks as the Broncos are on vacation in late-June. Training camp and the preseason will have more to say on all receiver spots after Thomas and Sanders.

Stuff happens. Taylor, Raymond, Brown and Sharp all have a shot.

In your opinion, does Kyle Sloter show enough talent to be compete for the QB position in the future? Thanks.

Christopher Gray Evans

Christopher—Sloter did shown a strong arm during the Broncos’ offseason practices. And he’s a good athlete.

The former Southern Miss and Northern Colorado receiver had a terrific senior year as a one-year starting quarterback for the UNC Bears in 2016.

He got plenty of reps for the Broncos this offseason because seventh-round rookie Chad Kelly was sidelined to recover from a torn ACL in his knee and torn ligaments in his right throwing wrist.

Sloter won’t make the Broncos’ season-opening roster and because the team already has three young quarterbacks, I don’t see them keeping him for their practice squad, either.

I’m not going to count Sloter out, though. He might have to bounce around for a few years, go from team to team and spend a couple years on various practice squads. And he’ll need some luck.
The key for him going forward will be to stay at it. He might get cut, demoralized, forced to find employment in professional leagues other than the NFL. He might even have to stock shelves in a grocery store for a few months.

But if he stays at it, he might have a shot.

With your vast experience as an insider of the Denver Broncos, what most caught your eye in the work of the new coaching staff? Were there many changes in the form of training since leaving of Gary Kubiak?

I'm from Brazil, I have a website called Broncos Brasil, and we love your job, Mike.

Sávio Pereira Ferreira

Sávio—The expanse of the Broncos’ fan base cannot be overestimated. In the offseason, we don’t really interact with the coaches much other than the top guy, Vance Joseph.

Using only Broncos head coaches I’ve covered for comparison, he’s a little like John Fox in that Joseph is an overseer who pays a little more attention to the defense.

Gary Kubiak was a hands-on coach with the offense, especially with young quarterbacks. Kubiak didn’t bother with the defense. He let Wade Phillips handle that side. Come to think of it, Phillips didn’t bother much with the defense, either. He let his defensive assistants run practice.

I would say Joseph’s practices were similar to that of Kubiak’s. Joseph had his regulars practice a little more than did Kubiak, who was always conscious about saving his veteran’s legs. I think Kubiak gave the team the final minicamp practice off the previous two years. Joseph had them practice till the end. I thought Joseph made a terrific offseason debut, for what that’s worth.

I don’t much evaluate the process, Sávio. The NFL is all about results. There are different methods that work. We’ve seen New England assistant coaches fail using the exact same methods as Bill Belichick. We’ve seen head coaches succeed when they spent much of their time working the periphery of the job.

Kubiak was 24-11 with a Super Bowl ring during his two years as the Broncos’ head coach. That’s going to be difficult for Joseph to beat. All we really know about this new coaching staff is its 0-0.

Ever since we decided to hire Mike McCoy as offensive coordinator again, I’ve been wondering if either Trevor Siemian or Peyton Lynch have somehow been able to get a hold of Peyton Manning (or will in the future) for some tips on how to run the nuances of the offense that he himself spent a few years in playing at an extremely high level? Do you think there is also any chance the Broncos bring him back in the building for a couple practices to help these two develop? Thanks!

Nate Healy, Los Angeles

Nate—Manning did attend one offseason practice. And I do think it would be a good idea for Manning to show up for a day during training camp. Allow him to watch practice, go through the practice film in the afternoon meeting with the quarterbacks, talk offense during lunch. It would probably be a better idea to have him spend a day with McCoy and quarterbacks coach Bill Musgrave.

But otherwise, the idea of the former great giving tips to current players – it doesn’t work like that. Coaching is such a relationship-based business. Manning isn’t around. He doesn’t know Lynch. How’s he supposed to help a guy he doesn’t know?

He knows Siemian because they spent a year together in 2015 – Manning’s last; Siemian’s first. But Siemian and Lynch are so immersed with their own coaches all day during meetings and practice, the last thing they want to do is go home and have a former player tell them how it should be done. Even if it’s a former great player.

Besides, what made Manning great was his anticipation and timing with receivers during a live, game-day play. They were covered when he cocked his arm to throw as at least one pass rusher was closing in.

They were open by 5 yards by the time the ball landed in the receiver’s arms. No one ever threw- ‘em-open like Peyton Manning. No one ever will.

You can’t coach that. You can’t even explain it. You must feel it. You must develop that through playing.

Manning is better off scheduling out time for his kids’ functions. But a day back at the place he may so fondly refer to as UCHealth Training Center would be productive for all involved.

Hey Mike was wondering if there was any chance we might try to flip Latimer, or Sunshine Taylor for a linebacker like Mychal Kendricks. I know it would be taking on a bit of salary, but I would think he could replace David and give us two pretty good coverage linebackers. Your thoughts.

Adrian Watson

Adrian—By David, you mean David Trevathan? The Broncos already have two good inside linebackers in Brandon Marshall and Todd Davis. Marshall is a three-down, all-around linebacker who can cover. Davis is a sure tackler against the run.

Corey Nelson is a good coverage linebacker. Zaire Anderson is a good tackler against the run.

Kendricks has been a good linebacker for the Philadelphia Eagles, but he’d be a backup on the Broncos. He only started half the games for Philadelphia last year. The Eagles were a top 13 defense last year; the Broncos were a top 4 defense.

The key for the Broncos’ inside linebacker unit this year is Marshall. Between offseason contract distraction, protest against social injustice distraction, and lingering hamstring injury, he did not play at the same level in 2016 as he did in 2015. The Broncos need Marshall to return to 2015 form.
Broncos believe Brock Olivo has learned special-teams lessons well

By Jeff Legwold
ESPN
June 23, 2017

The Denver Broncos know firsthand the kind of impact that Dave Toub has on special-teams play.

Toub’s units have tormented the Broncos over the years. With the Chiefs last season, Tyreek Hill returned a kickoff 86 yards for a touchdown against Denver. Toub had Devin Hester as his returner when he was the Chicago Bears’ special-teams coach before that. Hester returned a punt and a kickoff for a score against the Broncos in a rain-swept 37-34 victory over Denver in November 2007.

The Broncos interviewed Toub for their head coaching job earlier this year. But when they hired Vance Joseph instead, Joseph then hired Toub’s special-teams assistant -- Brock Olivo -- with the hope some of Toub’s teachings rubbed off.

The Broncos need to raise the bar on special teams.

“That guy has some energy," Broncos punter Riley Dixon said. “To see somebody who cares so much about it, as much as we do, because so many times, special teams is overlooked by some coaches. Or they don’t have the passion that us specialists have for that position or for that part of the game. To see a guy with as much fire and energy that he has is awesome."

What Toub has done in recent years shouldn’t be minimized or ignored. This past week, Football Outsiders ranked the top 30 special-teams units over the last 30 NFL seasons and Toub coached five of them: the Chiefs in 2013 and 2016 and the Bears in 2006, 2007 and 2011.

The colorful Olivo, who coached football in Italy and ran for office in Missouri’s ninth congressional district, has repeatedly credited Toub for preparing him for the job. Olivo hopes to replicate even some of Toub’s success.

“You pull together all of the good ideas that you think are the best of what we know and we roll from there,” Olivo said. “The majority of it is what I brought over from Kansas City, no question."

There is room to grow, to be sure. The Broncos have prioritized special-teams play. They have practiced it, expended plenty of time and effort and yet have reaped few rewards since they decided Trindon Holliday’s fumbles outweighed his touchdown potential after the 2013 season.

Omar Bolden looked to be a solution in the return game -- he had a 77-yard kickoff return in 2014 to go with 83-yard punt return for a touchdown in 2015 -- but Bolden battled injuries. So, in the last three seasons, the Broncos’ return game has largely been a play-it-safe, just-catch-the-ball affair.
The Broncos haven’t had their primary punt returner bring one back longer than 22 yards since 2013. Bolden only returned five punts in 2015, when he scored his touchdown.

The Broncos are also replacing special-teams captain Kayvon Webster, who signed with the Los Angeles Rams in free agency. But the Broncos selected two potential returners in the draft this past April -- wide receivers Carlos Henderson and Isaiah McKenzie -- and believe they have the team speed up and down the roster to give Olivo a quality starting point.

Olivo hung a large chart in the team meeting room that will ultimately tell the tale. It’s a points system Olivo will use to rank each of the Broncos’ special-teams players as well as where their units rank in the league each week of the season.

“We put that week’s point leader’s picture front and center so everyone could see it,” Olivo said. “At the end of the year, we tally up the points and name a points leader ... it creates interest and competition. The guys are fired up. They can’t wait to get in on Monday to see how many points they made, or what place they’re in amongst the team. It’s a great way to create interest and competition. ... It creates that brotherhood. Special teams is kind of a niche, and so we do everything we can to make it feel as special as it is.”
Broncos announce 12 training camp practices free to the public

Fans seeking a first-hand look at the Broncos’ quarterback competition and the team’s promised reboot are in luck. The Broncos will feature 12 training camp practices open to the public, beginning July 27 from 9:30 a.m. through noon.

This will be the standard time for the workouts at the UCHealth Training Center, which will be highlighted by the quarterback derby between Trevor Siemian and Paxton Lynch. There are fewer practices available to fans this summer because the Broncos are heading to Santa Clara, Calif., for joint workouts with the San Francisco 49ers in mid August. The Broncos hosted the 49ers last summer.

The Broncos are looking to improve the fan experience based on feedback. As such, there will be multiple food trucks parked outside the Pat Bowlen Fieldhouse, and ATM and credit card acceptance capabilities will be added. Admission is free to practice and gates open for first-come, first-serve parking 90 minutes prior to the workout. The schedule is as follows:

By Troy Renck
KMGH
June 23, 2017

There remains a "Most Interesting Man in The World" thread to Von Miller's offseason. He has attended Drake concerts, sat courtside at the NBA Finals -- "I believe LeBron could definitely play in the NFL," he told me -- and added multiple tattoos. The ink includes the Super Bowl 50 trophy, his autograph and, while on a flight from Atlanta, the logo for Young Money on his leg.

It applies to Von specifically, but the Broncos' roster in general. As Denver looks to rebound, reboot, revive -- pick the word that works for you -- there's no way to understate the importance of the kids. The Broncos' draft fell in a way that produced players in specific areas of need. Miller noticed.

"We have a lot of rookies that are going to help us win games. (Punt returner/receiver) Isaiah (McKenzie) is going to be able to make a lot of great plays. It's what we've been missing, a big-time return man," Miller said, while taking a break from working with the 550 kids at his football camp on Wednesday. "He's dynamic. The rookies really fit into the weaknesses we had before. I feel really good about it."

The Broncos selected left tackle Garett Bolles in the first round. He began taking first-team reps in mini-camp last week, leaving him in position to push for a starting job on opening night.

"It's about being consistent. I have to continue to pick up my game and work on my pass set. The NFL is rough sport and you have to be mentally prepared in every aspect of life. I am going in there open minded," Bolles told Denver7 on Thursday at Ed McCaffrey's Football Camp. "I will work hard and smack people around, that's what I do,"

In a story I have written and will appear this weekend on the weekend Denver7 sports, Miller has taken Bolles under his wing. He loves the inquisitive nature of the first-round pick, saying "his thirst for knowledge leads to greatness."

In the end, the kids should help. But even Miller knows the one question tattooed on every reporter's script entering training camp involves the quarterbacks. He isn't picking a favorite between Trevor Siemian and Paxton Lynch, yet remains confident in the choices.

"It's natural for you guys in the media. I feel comfortable with both of those guys. Trevor has been solid for us. Paxton has been solid for us," Miller said. "I am looking forward to the competition."

*Dates and times subject to change

A new feature at this year's training camp will be the addition of food trucks, which will be located on the west side of the Pat Bowlen Fieldhouse, available throughout training camp.

Also, on Aug. 4, the Broncos will hold their annual Kid's Day at Camp to celebrate Miles' birthday. For more information on attending, please see below.

Admission: Practices are free and open to the public for viewing beginning on Thursday, July 27. Gates for public practices will open approximately 90 minutes before the session begins (8 a.m.).

Fan Parking: Parking at the Broncos’ facility is located adjacent to the Pat Bowlen Fieldhouse (13403 Broncos Pkwy.) on a first-come, first-serve basis. Because space is limited, please arrive early. The parking area is open two-and-a-half hours before the start of each practice (7 a.m.). Please avoid parking on streets across from UCHealth Training Center.

General Seating: Fans will be able to view the practices from selected areas that will be marked clearly on site. Fans will primarily be seated along the berm on the west end of the practice fields. The seating area is on a natural grass surface with a very limited amount of shade, so please bring proper footwear, clothing and sunscreen.

ADA: Admission to the Denver Broncos’ 2017 training camp will be ADA accessible. Designated ADA parking will be available in the main fan lot. Please note that, like general seating, ADA parking and admission is limited and will be available on a first first-come, first-serve basis.
Bag Policy: The Broncos’ stadium bag policy will be in effect for all training camp practices. Please see below for details or visit Sports Authority Field at Mile High’s website for more information.

- Each fan may carry one bag that is clear plastic, vinyl or PVC, no larger than 12” x 6” x 12” or a one-gallon clear plastic freezer bag (Ziploc or similar).
- In addition to one of the bags noted above, fans may also carry in a small clutch bag or purse approximately the size of a hand, with or without a handle or strap, subject to search.
- Diapers and wipes can be carried in a clear bag. Diaper bags are not permitted.
- Remove any jackets or other large, bulky items from your bag and carry these in hand. When the contents of your bag are clearly visible, staff can screen bags without requiring any contents to be removed. If blankets or other items conceal the contents of a bag, staff must request that they be removed in order for screening to take place, delaying the process.
- Small cameras, binoculars and cell phones are acceptable if carried in loosely or in an approved clear bag.
- Seat pads are permitted as long as they do not exceed 18 inches wide and do not contain pockets, zippers or concealable areas.

Food & Beverage: A new feature for fans at 2017 Denver Broncos training camp will be the presence of food trucks on the west side of the Pat Bowlen Fieldhouse. A variety of food options from around the Denver metro area will be available to fans throughout training camp (please note that meals brought from food trucks will not be permitted inside the practice field gates; food and non-alcoholic beverages are allowed inside the practice field gates in small individual quantities only)

Lawn Chairs: Lawn chairs will not be allowed at training camp.

Umbrellas: Umbrellas of any size will not be permitted inside the Broncos’ training facility. Please bring sufficient wet weather attire if necessary.

Strollers: Will be allowed on the premises but must be left at the gate prior to accessing seating area.

Cameras: Fans are welcome to use still cameras during Broncos’ 2017 training camp, but video cameras (and other recording devices such as cell phones and tablets) will not be permitted. Only members of the media will be allowed to bring cameras with professional lenses and tripods to training camp. Any detachable lenses longer than the length of a credit card will not be permitted on camp premises.

Autographs: Players will be designated by position groups (WRs, DLs, DBs, etc.) to sign autographs for fans after each practice open to the public. All autographs will take place by the guest seating area located on the west end of the practice fields.

Restrooms: Public restrooms will be available for fans near the entrance to the practice fields.

Inclement Weather: In case of lightning or other inclement weather, fans will be cleared out of the general seating area, allowing for sufficient time to reach their vehicles.

Stuff for Students School Supplies Drive: The Denver Broncos have teamed up with 9News to support their annual Stuff for Students school supplies drive during 2017 Training Camp. The Broncos invite fans to Be A Champion in the Community and bring the following donation items to any of the public training camp practices:
• Backpacks (for all ages)
• 3-ring binders
• Spiral notebooks
• Packs of colored markers
• 24-count box of crayons

Fans who donate at least one listed item, make a minimum $5 donation (cash or credit) or visit the tent will be entered to win a football signed by one of your Denver Broncos. School supplies will be distributed by Volunteers of America to schools in need across Colorado.
CenturyLink hosts 'Dinner with a Draft Pick' with Garett Bolles
By Aric DiLalla
DenverBroncos.com
June 23, 2017

Garett Bolles had his eyes on the Wagyu Tomahawk Chop.

As he scanned the menu, nothing looked better to the 6-foot-5 offensive lineman than that 32 oz. ribeye.

But his Thursday trip to Del Frisco’s Double Eagle Steak House was about more than a prime cut of meat.

Bolles dined with Lisa LaPoint, who won the third annual “Dinner with a Draft Pick” contest, presented by Century Link.

The Broncos rookie offensive tackle was joined by his wife, Natalie, and their infant son, Kingston. While Kingston played with a toy in his high chair, the couple posed for pictures and chatted with LaPoint and her guests over dinner.

“It’s good for the fans to sit down with us and see how we are in the normal life,” said Bolles before the meal began. “They only see us in a helmet and jersey, and they enjoy watching us on social media. So being with [them] will be awesome.”

The contest, which began on April 27 and ran through May, gave Broncos fans the opportunity to win an all-expenses paid dinner for themselves and three guests with one of Denver’s 2017 NFL Draft picks.
Von Miller has very high praise for Broncos’ rookie Garett Bolles

By Ryan Koenigsberg
BSN Denver
June 23, 2017

The second to last day of the Denver Broncos offseason program saw a very intriguing matchup: Two first round picks. The face of the franchise vs. the future of the frontline. Von Miller vs. Garett Bolles.

Two very interesting developments came out of that matchup. The first being that Bolles held his own, far from embarrassed by one of the league’s best, the second being that when Miller did get the best of him, he took his time to help educate the young lineman on why he got the best of him.

It was a welcome sight to see for anyone invested in the Broncos, the team’s best player going out of his way to help improve their latest big investment. A member of the vaunted defense going out of their way to help a member of the upstart offense.

After some inquiry, Miller revealed that he has taken a bit of a liking to the new guy. On Wednesday, at the Von Miller Pro Camp, the Super Bowl 50 MVP explained how that came about.

“It just happened,” Miller explained. “I texted him on draft day, he texted me back and then he called me, and we talked for a second. Right when I saw him I just saw myself in him. I saw the goofy kid that asks a lot of questions. That’s all I did when [former Bronco Elvis Dumervil] was here; we had “Doom’ and DJ [Williams] and [Brian] Dawkins and Champ [Bailey] and all of those guys. The same stuff he’s doing with us is the same stuff I was doing with those guys. I asked all types of questions; I just wanted to be great.”

“I think that thirst for knowledge and that thirst for greatness leads to greatness,” he added. “It definitely helped with some of my success, and I see some of the same stuff I see in Bolles in myself; his humor is different just like my humor is different, you see him run out on the field all goofy and stuff. I love that guy, man. Bolles, that’s my guy, he’s gonna be good.”

If you’re a Broncos fan, that is the stuff you want to hear about your first-round pick. Everything you heard about Bolles’ desire appears to be shining in front of his teammates.

Even better news, Bolles isn’t the only newcomer that Von is high on.

“We have a lot of rookies that are going to help us win games,” he explained. “I think Isaiah [McKenzie] is going to make a lot of great plays for us, that’s what we’ve been missing is a big time return man, he’s dynamic, he’s going to be able to do a lot of great stuff for us. The rookies really fit into some of our weaknesses that we had last season.”

“I’m looking forward to seeing Chad Kelly get in there and do some great stuff,” he later added when talking quarterbacks. “He’s a great guy; he’s a great fixture in our locker room.”

The future is bright, according to the present.

Akili Smith, the No. 3 overall pick from the 1999 NFL Draft, along with two former Denver Broncos Tatum Bell and Reuben Droughns will assist in leading a football camp in conjunction with Brave Children and their Struggles (C.A.T.S.).

The trio of former NFL players is helping lead a two-day football camp with Brave C.A.T.S. on July 29-30 at the Sports Complex in Torrington. Smith will lead a two-day passing academy, with the position players working with Bell, Droughns and other staff over the weekend.

The camp will be split up by age group, with the 6-10-year-olds strictly working in the field from 10 a.m.-12 p.m. The 11-18-year-olds start in the classroom at 1 p.m. and then hit the field, wrapping up at 3 p.m.

Smith was drafted by the Cincinnati Bengals in the 1999 NFL Draft after playing two years at the University of Oregon. While a Duck during the 1999 season, he threw for 3,763 yards and 32 touchdowns, with only eight interceptions. He had a 58 percent completion percentage. He also added four rushing touchdowns to his stat line.

Smith spent four years in the NFL, all with Cincinnati. He played in 22 games over the four seasons, racking up six total touchdowns.

Bell was drafted 41st overall in the 2004 NFL draft by the Broncos. The Oklahoma State product played 42 games during his first three years in the league. The running back amassed 13 touchdowns and more than 2,300 yards during that time. He then spent a season in Detroit, playing in five games, before returning to Denver in 2008. During his final season in the NFL, Bell played in seven games, racking up two touchdowns almost 250 yards.

Droughns was a teammate of Smith with Oregon. In 1999 with the Ducks, the running back racked up 1,234 yards and nine touchdowns on the ground. His efforts at Oregon put him as the 81st overall pick in the 2000 draft by the Detroit Lions.

After one season with the Lions, Droughns found himself with the Broncos, where he played three seasons. He really blossomed in 2004 for Denver, racking up 1,240 yards and six touchdowns. Later in his career, Droughns played two years for the Cleveland Browns (1,990 total rushing yards and six touchdowns) and one year for the New York Giants (275 rushing yards and six touchdowns).

The cost for the camp is $200. Pre-registration before July 8 is only $100. There are scholarships available for those that qualify.

There is also a meet-and-greet open to the public July 29 at the Western Travel Terminal in Torrington from 4-7 p.m.

Family suing Broncos Stadium after deadly fall last October

The family of a man who died in a fall at the stadium formerly known as Sports Authority Field at Mile High last October is suing the Metropolitan Football Stadium District seeking an unstated amount of damages.

According to 9NEWS, the family of Jason Coy filed a claim dated April 11, 2017 alleging that the staircase when Coy fell to his death was “inherently dangerous to patrons” of the stadium.

“On October 24, 2016, while attending a Denver Bronco’s football game as an invitee inside the Sports Authority Field at Mile High, Mr. Coy fell to his death in a fire escape corridor and staircase, inside the North East concourse of the stadium,” the suit states. “The subject corridor was designed, built, and maintained as a fire evacuation escape route and egress method for invited game attendees. The corridor and staircase contained a vault and open shaft that was inherently dangerous to patrons, and Mr. Coy slipped over a handrail near the top of the staircase, falling to his death, at or near the base below. We believe the Stadium District, and others, failed to make the subject staircase and stairwell, reasonably safe for invited guests/patrons, and this failure led directly to Mr. Coy’s fatal injuries.”

Coy was attending a game between the Houston Texans and Broncos the night he fell.
